

INSPECTOR REPORTS ON FLOOD PROBLEM

Recommends New Catch Basins for Lincoln-av and Wilson-av

Construction of four new catch basins at the intersection of Lincoln-av and Wilson-av, to eliminate the flooded condition of the territory following rains, was recommended by Building Inspector Carl Towner at City Council meeting last night. The situation was investigated by the building inspector following filing of complaints by residents of Lincoln-av.

In his report the inspector said he had found the sewer on Lincoln-av in good condition, although under capacity, but that an inspection of the catch basins at the four corners of Wilson-av and Lincoln-av showed them to be too shallow, without goose-necks and the brick badly disintegrated. In one instance the inspector said he found a 10-inch straight tile connecting the catch basin with the storm water sewer filled to within one and one-half inch of the top with mud and sticks. He recommended installing of the new type of catch basin, estimating the cost as $250 for the four basins. The report was accepted and placed on file. No action toward building of the new basins was taken by council, it being the general opinion that instead of remedying each individual defect in the sewer system as discovered by the inspector, it would be a better plan to group them and issue bonds to meet the cost.

STREET IMPROVEMENT PROJECTS APPROVED

Paving and Sewers Got Favorsite Action at Meeting of City Council

Petitions for improving Walnut-st from Delaware-av to Vine-st, paving Pennsylvania-av from Center-st to Church-st and building a group of sewers in Elm Heights which were referred to the street and alley committee and the sewer committee at the last meeting of City Council, were returned to council at its meeting last night with the approval of the committee, and were referred to the city solicitor for legislation.

Walnut-st will be a macadam base surfaced with asphalt and Pennsylvania-av will be of brick. An offer of property owners on Walnut-st to pay the cost of macadamizing the street was turned down by the street and alley committee of council several weeks ago on the grounds that the improvement would not be permanent. It is believed, however, that the topping of asphalt will give the street permanency.

The stormwater and sanitary sewers provided for in the petition approved by the sewer committee are in an easement strip of land between lots 12175 and 13177 on Fairhaven-av east from an existing sewer at the rear of lot 13175 to Haney-av from Haney-av from Fairhaven-av eastward 200 feet north of Lark-st, on King-av from Fairhaven-av eastward 200 feet north of Buxley-av and on King-av to a point 120 feet east of Summit-st.

ORDINANCE VOTED DOWN BY COUNCIL

Proposal for New Store Building on Davids-st Defeated in First Reading

On the grounds that there are enough grocery stores in the neighborhood at the present time to meet requirements, an ordinance establishing a commercial zone at Davids and Woods-av to provide for a new store building, was lost on the suspension of the rules at the meeting of City Council last night, when Councilmen Schneider, Good and Starr voted against the suspension.

The ordinance, which was given its first reading, was the result of a recommendation made by the City Planning Commission, that a commercial zone be established at that point. A petition asking for the privilege of erecting a store building was submitted by E. V. Granger to the Planning Commission at a called meeting held last week.

The building, which it was said, would be occupied by a chain store company, would be one story, of brick construction and trimmed with stone. It was also said at council meeting last night that Granger would seek permission to build a similar building at the intersection of Silver and Leder-st.

Council provided for a sidewalk on the west side of S. Prospect-st from Center-av to the end of the present walk, when a resolution declaring the improvement necessary, was passed.

Leadership in Sunday School League No. 2 became a tangled mess today as a result of a series of upsets in contests played on four diamonds last night.

Two league leading teams were given their first defeats of the season while second place aggregations won. This set four teams into first place with an average of .750.

The big upset last night came when United Brethren, 3 to 2, in an eight-inning contest. The Christians scored two runs early in the game while Lee Street tied the score in the seventh.

Epworth Juniors gave the United Brethren also a 2 to 1 defeat in seven innings. The losers scored in the fourth inning while the Epworth team touched their hits in the fifth frame for two runs.

In a seven-inning slugfest, the First Lutheran side won its first contest of the season defeating Forest Lawn, 13 to 11. The Forest Lawn team had the Cleveland, May 28.—Tony Marullo of New Orleans, middleweight, today realized that Mickey Walker is a true middleweight champion. Walker easily defeated Marullo in the main bout of 10 rounds at the Olympic Arena here before 3,000 fight fans last night.

Tony landed several good blows on the champion's jaw but it caused no damage. Marullo suffered a split lip and a bloody nose.

Walker after slugging his opponent in the first three rounds had things his own way the rest of the bout. In the fourth he clouted lefts and rights to Tony's jaw and kept this up until the tenth, when he tried for a knockout but the man from New Orleans was game and was on his feet when the last gong sounded.

contest seemed up until the last inning when the Reformed team pushed across four runs to win.

Presbyterian No. 2 remained in the cellar after being blanked by the Lutherans, 5 to 0.

In tonight's games in Sunday School League No. 1, St. Mary's is favored to continue its unblemished leadership of the loop by defeating Wexley. This contest is slated for the Milk Mill diamond.

Calvary, champions of Marion last year, can keep in the running by defeating the Epworth Juniors at Fairfield. Other games scheduled are: Presbyterian vs. Christian at Central; Trinity vs. Epworth at Lincoln.

AMERICAN PENNANT RESTS WITH YANKEES AS ATHLETICS FAIL

Mackmen Only Team Given Chance To Defeat New York Sluggers

BY DAVID J. WALSH

New York, May 28.—Those five out of six games in which the Yankees knocked the Athletics for a series of re-organizations, ending in Philadelphia yesterday, have just about closed the book in the American League Race. Harp's Paragon my lip, I didn't even mean chase. The American League today is sponsoring an endurance contest, meaning that the public will need a lot of stamina to stay with the situation much longer. To all intents, the New York Yankees have won the pennant in the first six weeks of the season and, if you think this is being a trifle premature, I can only commend your attention to the following:

Nothing except a victory for the Athletics in the series just concluded could have kept the American League problem within focus. The collapse of that club simply meant that the bottom had fallen out of the business and that the opposition, actual enough while the Athletics were losing only four games between April 19 and May 24, had become only a flimsy pretense. Oddly enough, the Yankees are not the fool-proof outfit they were in 1927 and I don't mean that the contention is more fat headed, either. The Browns, Red Sox, Indians and Athletics appear to be stronger this year, potentially and, in some cases, actually. The Yankees should be better, too, or at least as good as they were. The fact of the matter is that the contention can't hope to get anywhere with a club that wins not only by the law of respective values but by ordination.

Pete Donahue Turns In Win Over Chicago Cubs

New York, May 28.—Boasting a lead of two full games over the Chicago Cubs, the Cincinnati Reds today won a 2 to 1 verdict. Lu Blue got a homer.

The Browns clambered back into the first division, as the White Sox were whitewashed, 2 to 0, by old Tom Zachary of the Senators. A double steal by Gossin and Judge beat Ed Morris, star Boston rookie twirler.

The business of stopping the Yankees degenerated from a joke into a farce when the world's champions swamped the battered Athletics, 11 to 4, for the fifth time in the six-game series. For the second time in a week the Yankees vainglorious Lefty Grove, once their nemesis, Dugan and Lazzeri each collected their third homer of the series.

The A's now trail the Yankees by eight games and Connie Mack is getting desperate. He has shipped considerable cash and two pitchers—Jing Johnson, a veteran, and Bill Shores, a promising rookie—to Baltimore in exchange for George Earnshaw, mound ace of the Orioles.

BOXING COMMISSION MAY SETTLE BATTLE BETWEEN PROMOTERS

Expect Fight Over Loughran's Services To End In Compromise

New York, May 28.—The promoters' war over the services of Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, was carried up to the New York Boxing Commission today with the title-holder's manager, Joe Smith, and Humbert Fugazy lined up against Tex Rickard.

Loughran was unable to be present as he is in Philadelphia completing training for his 15-round bout at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, tomorrow night. Fugazy is staging that bout and also has Loughran signed to meet Leo Lomski in the same ring on June 13.

Smith has regulated an option held by Rickard on the champion's services and has steadfastly declined to sign a contract for Loughran to box Jimmy Slattery. The commission last week approved June 14 as a date for this match and Slattery is training for it. It is believed the controversy will end in a compromise with a new set of dates for Slattery and Lomski.

Meanwhile, Lomski declares that Loughran would be champion after tomorrow evening and that he will thus relieve Slattery and Lomski of the challenging burden.

WOODS and WATERS by Homer Bow

Pelee Island, located in Canadian waters, offers some of the best small mouth bass fishing to be had within several hundred miles of Marion. This island, situated in Lake Erie, has grounds which are to the particular liking of the "gamest" fish that swims.

Conventional plugs make good lure during the summer months, with bait fishing at its best in the fall. Minnows are used.

To get in the vicinity of the island, one can take the Pacific-Bay from Sandusky and hire launches or bats. Guides can also be found at that point. Be sure to have a Canadian fishing license.

Water Dogs
Water dogs, mud puppies, or whatever else you care to call them, seem to be in abundance this year. Early trips to Ohio streams have meant that a number of these big salamanders have been taken. They bite on any live bait and prepared lures and are sold very much in demand by fishermen.

Recently I was using a casting outfit and had a worm on it, bating on the bottom for suckers. One of these things fancied the worm and took it. When I landed him on the bank he started a series of contortions, which would have put the fair lady who head the center of attraction in a recent circus act, by spinning on a trapeze, to shame.

He continued as long as she, and when he had finished there was at least six feet of good silk line wrapped around his torso, and those who are familiar with "dogs" and the same that covers their body and sticks like glue to the hands, can imagine what happened for the next 15 minutes.

The learned gentlemen who band the water dog a Latin name as long as an ordinary casting line, say that they can't find out where it fits into nature's program. Outside of game eating young water puppies, they don't have any value.

I have performed an autopsy on every one caught this spring and with exceptions have found crabs as contents. Early in the spring were full of them and eating and else but.

It seems that the peculiar shape head and the wide mouth would enable them to play havoc among crabs.

NO VIOLATION
The premise of this item is that Illinois law forbids the use of a lure fish.

Frank Crows was charged with luring fish. He admitted the story from Aurora, Ill.

"The lantern," he told Judge Ham, "was to read by."

"Ah, yes," nodded the court, "what, may I ask, were you reading?" "The fish and game laws," replied Crows.

"I suppose," pursued the judge, "that you recall some of the more interesting sections?"

"Yes, your honor. I recall one also saying that it is illegal to lure fish, although there is no rule against using it to read by."

"The purpose of knowledge," said court, "is highly commendable. It is no disposition of this court to interfere with study. The case is dismissed."

CANTON BALL TEAM GETS THIRD LEADER
Dan O'Leary, Former Cleveland Scout, Will Manage Nine
Canton, May 29.—Julius Munch, Canton Central League manager, has been replaced by Dan O'Leary, former Cleveland Indian baseball club scout, it was learned today. O'Leary is the third manager for Canton since the season opened a month ago.

Munch, formerly of Erie in last year's Pennsylvania League, took charge of the team from Joe Agler, local man and first baseman.

O'Leary managed the Idaho Falls club in the Utah-Idaho League last year and announced signing four new players as he took charge of the team at Erie.

WEST VIRGINIANS CAST VOTES TODAY

Smith and Reed and Hoover and Goff in Opposition

Charleston, W. Va., May 29.—West Virginians crowded to the polls today to settle one of the hottest primary election fights of recent years.

On the Republican side Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover has evaded the state against Senator Guy B. Goff, the favorite son candidate. Nineteen votes at Kansas City are at stake.

Gov. Al Smith of New York is opposed by Senator James A. Reed of Missouri for the 16 votes to Houston. In addition there are full state tickets up for nomination.

SIX FOR SMITH
Washington instructs 12 delegates to Democratic convention.
Washington, May 29.—Six additional votes were in Gov. Al Smith's presidential column today.

A voteless Washington, in a Democratic primary yesterday, instructed 12 delegates, each with half a vote, to stand by Smith until the end at Houston. There were 7,450 votes cast.

The delegates include R. W. Hoising, brother of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Breckinridge Long, assistant secretary of state in the Wilson administration, and Mrs. George E. Mayne, wife of the ex-ambassador to Russia.

Adam and Eve once bowed to the whole world, but prosperity was too much for them.

Lillian K., with Nat Ray up are favorites to win.
Joe McEraw, of Washington, Pa., is the prevailing judge, while Steve Phillips, of Xenia, will send them down. Horace here will be shipped to Nashville for the second meeting of the year which is to open June 6.

'I Know Men'

"I see them—day after day, year after year—thousands and thousands of them... old admirers and new friends. And each day their number is greater."

Two Sides of the Fence

There are two sides of the fence today. A city, in its bid for industry and progress, must be on one of the two sides. There is no such thing as staying a-top the fence. On one side are out-grown ideas of values, and stagnation. On the other, clear-minded realization of what industry demands, 1928 ideas of worth and values, and steady constant growth.

It is for Marion to choose her side of the industrial fence.

Recognition of the fact that an efficient gas is necessary to industry, and that the most is the value of the gas, is the key to the growth of the city.

Aggressive Movement in Motors Is Market Feature

EASIER MONEY IS ANTICIPATED

Chrysler and Dodge Forced Forward by Strong Bullish Pool

Markets at a Glance
Industrial stocks strong; railroad stocks steady; domestic bonds steady; foreign bonds firm; call money 6 to 7 1/2 per cent; grain weak; cotton steady; copper firm; oil steady; sugar steady; rubber steady; pig iron firm; foreign exchange irregular.

By W. S. COUSINS
International News Service Financial Editor

New York, May 23.—An aggressive, brilliant and active forward movement in the American motor stocks today helped to push aside the feelings of hesitancy in speculative circles which arose from the advance of call money to 6 1/2 per cent. A half-dozen of the best known motor stocks (excluding General Motors) participated in this brilliant advance, and prices moved with little or no interruption from the opening going over a distance of two to 12 points.

Wall Street was generally of the opinion that the "aggressive" movement in the motor stocks today was the beginning of the June settlements this week. Millions of dollars paid to individuals and corporations for interest and dividends will be finding their way back to the banks next week, and will be available for stock market purposes. It is also known that the treasury officials are desirous of having interest rates kept down until their big refunding operations have been completed.

A powerful and aggressive bullish pool "took hold" of Chrysler Motors at the beginning of the session and at the first price of the day was four points higher than on Monday a close, a block of 25,000 shares selling at $4. The stock then moved forward to around $5 in unusually heavy trading. A 12-point jump in Dodge preferred to $3 was attributed to the trapping of a "sleeping short interest," but the common stock and the six per cent bonds of the company were also active and strong.

Strength and confidence of the motor stocks, in one of the most impressive forward movements of the month, was based on the enormous increase in business in the first quarter of this year, the glowing prospect for the second quarter, and the favorable reception accorded the new models of well known cars recently introduced to the market here and abroad. Some of the well known manufacturers of American cars have already earned their dividends for the full year 1932.

New cabbage was being quoted at 10 cents a drop of five cents under the price of last week. Slowness in demand as a result of the high price has resulted in a larger supply with a corresponding drop in price. New white silver skin onions were also being offered at two cents below the price of yesterday, when they sold at 10 cents a pound.

SPEAKER DEPLORES DECLINE IN VOTING

Candidate for Attorney General Addresses Marion Rotary Club

The gradually decreasing use of the ballot has placed our government in the hands of the minority with a tendency to disregard majority interests, John W. Bricker, former special counsel in the attorney general's office and now a candidate for the Republican nomination for attorney general, told Marion Rotarians at Hotel Harding yesterday afternoon.

As a result of this failure to use the ballot, a mass of confusing legislation has resulted. People are distinguishing between laws to be observed and those to be violated, Bricker said.

The speaker cited statistics in his home city of Columbus, revealing the percentage of people that refused to vote at the recent primary.

"Administrative boards and commissions now conduct a great part of our governmental functions. It has been the inevitable result of this complex industrial age. If America continues great as now, this new development must not be allowed to curb individual initiative, inventive genius or interfere with proper business incentive and enterprise, Bricker states. "Local self government was the cornerstone of our jurisprudence. We are in the midst of a centralization of power in the capital city. Government is being taken and twice removed from the voter. Proper attention to the affairs of the government, a correct appreciation of interest of one's community is the duty of good citizenship. It is the price of liberty, it is the consideration of freedom, it is the demand of democracy."

Induction of a number of new members into Rotary is on the program for next Monday's noon meeting. President Jesse H. Mason announced.

Tested... from Maine to Arizona for Power, Speed and Endurance

LONG ago, Hupmobile engineers found that the rigorous tests provided by Nature under varied climatic conditions far exceed those imposed by factory proving grounds. That is why every new Hupmobile model is tested in the field—on real mountains and under all atmospheric conditions from coast to coast. Maine and Minnesota give the sub-zero temperatures that prove efficiency of starting and lubricating systems. Uniontown Hill and Pike's Peak make strenuous demands on power and axle gearing. Cooling is checked at 120 degrees in Arizona; carburetion in Colorado's high altitudes and at sea-level in Florida. Thus, no matter where you live or drive, Hupmobile engineers have preceded you. One more reason why Hupmobile performance and stamina continue to win thousands of new owners from the ranks of those who formerly paid far more for equal luxury and dependability.

BYRD SELECTS JUNE AS MATE ON FLIGHT

Little Known Naval Flier Will Succeed Bennett for Polar Dash

New York, May 28.—Harold J. June, naval petty officer and aviation pilot, a young and comparatively unknown flier, has been selected by Com. Richard E. Byrd as the successor to Floyd Bennett for the proposed North Pole flight. Approval of the Navy Department is awaited.

Bennett was an obscure chief machinist's mate when picked by Commander Byrd from the ranks of the non-commissioned personnel of the navy, from which source his probable successor has been chosen.

June has had four years of flying in the navy, and 1,500 hours in the air. He was a member of the "million dollar Vanderbilt yacht crew" that sailed in a body in the naval forces during the war. Although June was without great means he served in the crew as chief engineer and joined with the rest of the party. He distinguished himself at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station for ability in handling engines.

NEW CANCER TREATMENT SEEN IN LEAD SOLUTION

Chicago—A solution of lead as a cure for cancer may be a reality in the future, declared Dr. W. T. Pettit of Ottawa, Ill., in an address before the radiology section of the Illinois State Medical Society.

"Lead, it has already been demonstrated, has an affinity for cancer cells," Dr. Pettit said. "Use of the metal in cases of persons believed hopelessly ill has brought cures to 20 per cent of the victims treated at the University of Liverpool."

The present task of science, according to Dr. Pettit, is to find the proper solution of the metal.

Dr. Pettit recently returned from a trip to Europe where he visited several noted cancer clinics.

AMERICAN EDUCATION IS BLAMED FOR REVOLUTION

Chicago—The Turkish revolt, the trouble in China, Russia's revolution and all the recent social revolution throughout the world are directly traceable to American education and civilization.

This is the opinion of Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan, and ex-president of the University of Michigan. Speaking before several hundred alumni of the University of Michigan at the Blackstone Hotel here recently, Mr. Osborn did not condemn American education because of these results but merely stated his opinion as a fact.

He continued: "The college graduate acts as an agent who influences the people with whom he comes into contact. His indirect influence is greater than the direct. Thus ideas and teachings have spread all over the world."

SCOTLAND YARD WILL CURB AUTO BANDITS

Ingenious Device for Barricading Main Roads Revealed by Police

London, May 28.—The days of the automobile bandit in England are numbered.

By an ingenious device for barricading main roads, Scotland Yard, Britain's famous police headquarters, believes it has solved the problem of preventing these bandits from escaping after perpetrating hold-ups.

For almost a year, numerous experiments have been carried out by the "Yard" in a London garage. The most effective trap devised so far consists of two steel drums, filled with material to give them a weight of ten tons each, connected by a wire.

The drums are anchored by a spiral spring and when not in action the linking wire will be concealed in a slot in the roadway. As soon as an alarm is given the wire will be raised, bent, and held by a lever and the obstruction marked by red lamps.

Any automobilist attempting to rush the barrier would find himself attempting to proceed with a dead weight of 20 tons attached to his car—that is, the total weight of the two drums, plus resistance of the spiral springs, which can only be stretched to an extreme length of fifty yards.

Tests conducted by the authorities have indicated that the device is the most practical yet evolved.

FLORIDA BLUE LAWS TROUBLE BALL PLAYERS

Tampa, Fla. —Charged with violating Florida's Sunday "blue laws" 14 players and two managers of the Tampa and Savannah baseball clubs of the Southern League, will go on trial here June 12. The men are charged with participating in a baseball game here on April 29.

According to present plans, all 39 of the baseball men will be tried jointly on a single count charging violation of the state law prohibiting baseball games on Sunday.

The players are all out under bonds of $100 each pending the trial. The two teams are scheduled to meet here June 12 and therefore all will be attendance at the trial.

nothing to dodge the law, were eliminated by City Council last night when an entirely new ordinance was passed fixing definitely the kind of a top to be placed on a cistern.

Taking advantage of the wording of the original ordinance, which provided merely "a top," property owners and tenants not interested in safety measures played a few light boards over the cistern openings.

Under the ordinance passed by council last night, however, the top must be of a substantial material and placed on the cistern so that it can not be opened by walking upon it or moved by children. The authority to make arrests for violation of the ordinance has also been extended to city firemen.

Under the ordinance passed last night, the sanitary commissioner, or any member of the police or fire department, is authorized to make arrests for violation of the ordinance. A fine of not more than $30 is provided for each day the cistern is open can constitute a separate offense.

In order to enable the Sanitary Commissioner Charles M. Tobin to take immediate care of a number of open cisterns, the ordinance was declared an emergency measure.

NO OIL FOR STREETS, CITY OFFICIAL SAYS

Funds Not Available for Work. Service Director Informs Council

That the street he oiled at once and kept oiled during the summer in order to keep down the dust, was the request by 18 DuSable property owners in a petition submitted to City Council at its meeting last night.

The petition was referred to Service Director Benedict, who said there will be no oil for streets this summer, due to lack of funds for that purpose.

Purchase of oil for streets was one of the items objected to by the Marion Auto Club in its protest against the manner in which the gasoline tax and automobile license fund was being used by the city, and as the result there is no money to be used for that purpose, the service director said.

Oiling of the unimproved streets and alleys has been held by the service director as coming under the head of street maintenance as provided by law and money for the purchase of oil was taken from the gasoline tax and automobile license fund. Following the protest of the club, the matter was taken up with the attorney general, who ruled that oiling of streets could not technically be held as street maintenance and since there was no money from any source for the purchase of oil, none was purchased.

REJECT PETITION

Council Members Refuse To Grant Request for Street Light

Declaring that there is only one house on that section of the street and it would require the setting of eight or ten poles to reach the spot, City Council at its meeting last night refused to grant a petition for installing of a street light on Madison north of the railroad. The petition, which was referred to the light committee at the last meeting of council, was not favored by the committee.

Mayor Earl Hazen's report for April, submitted at the meeting of council last night, showed $300 collected in building permits, $6.50 in registration fees and $5 in licenses.

Honor Our Dead Memorial Day

WAR'S sorrowful memories grow dimmer as the battles which bred them fade farther into the past.

But always on May 30th of each year we remember again with quickened pulse "the boys" who donned their country's uniform and marched away with Grant and Lee, Miles and Pershing.

On this day the soldiers of three generations parade in memory of their buddies who never returned home. Cheer the veterans. Honor their flag. Remember their comrades.

SCHAFFNER'S

ATTACKS LINDSEY'S MATRIMONY THEORY

Companionate Marriage Mask
for Birth Control Views, Says O. S. U. Professor

Marion Star Bureau
Ohio State University
Columbus, May 23—That Judge Lindsey is basically wrong in his theory of "Companionate Marriage" is the opinion of Dr. James E. Hagerly, head of the department of sociology and former dean of the College of Commerce and Administration, at Ohio State University.

"Judge Lindsey," Dr. Hagerly declares, "uses companionate marriage as a mask under which he delivers lectures on birth control. If Lindsey were to say that his lectures would be on birth control alone, it would be possible to count the members of his audience on your fingers."

The real definition of "Companionate
Marriage" was not presented by Judge Lindsey, Professor Hagerly maintains.
He gives the credit for this particular type of marriage to Professor McKnight of Harvard College, Columbia University, who says that the type is "the companionate state of lawful wedlock, entered into for the sole purpose of companionship and not with a view of children."

In regard to Judge Lindsey's belief that marriages should be made easier and that means for divorce and separations should also be made easier, Dr. Hagerly opines that the judge has made a serious mistake.
"If young people between the ages of 16 and 18 were to be allowed to enter into a state of companionate marriage, having no responsibility toward society or to themselves, and divorce and marriage were made simpler, many young people by the time they were 22 or 25 years of age would marry several times. At that age they have reached a point where they begin to consider a real marriage," Dr. Hagerly believes.

UNIFORMS PLANNED FOR DRY AGENTS

Commissioner Doran Takes Action To Present Unnecessary Casualties

Washington, May 23—Prohibition agents patrolling public highways will be equipped with distinctive uniforms,
Prohibition Commissioner James M.
Doran announced today.

This important step, long advocated in Congress, is a supreme effort to prevent unnecessary killings that have taken place as the result of agents stopping automobiles on the roads.

Doran declared that it is only natural that automobilists halted at night or on lonely highways, by un-uniformed men, frequently of rough appearance because of hard duty of long days in the field, become suspicious and make an effort to escape.

Circumstances of this character frequently have led agents to fire on fleeing automobiles and in unnecessary casualties when the government men were mistaken for robbers. An agent at Huntington, W. Va., recently was discharged by the Treasury department for firing into an automobile which fled after being accosted by the federal agent.

"It possibly will not be necessary to equip the agents with full uniforms," Doran said. "My present plan is to furnish each agent with a large, easily-recognized shield to the agents whose duties require the patrolling of roads and stopping of automobiles."

THE YEAR'S MOST BAFFLING SERIAL STORY

BY ABATHA CHRISTIE

What Had Happened So Far

John Cavendish meets an old friend Hastings on his way to work. Hastings tells him that his stepmother who owns the place has remarried and is now Mrs. Alice Ingelthorpe. At the Court Hastings meets Eric Howard, cousin to Mrs. Ingelthorpe, Cynthia Mason, a young protegee, and Mary Cavendish, John's wife. He finds the atmosphere highly charged and the Cavendishes resentful of the new husband's arrival. John's brother, Lawrence, appears and Eric tells John she is leaving and denounces Ingelthorpe as an adventurer. Later she begs Hastings to look after Mrs. Ingelthorpe, telling him that she is surrounded by a lot of sharks who are after her money. Dr. Bauerstein, an expert on poisons, comes to see Mrs. Cavendish. John explains to Hastings that he, his brother and his stepmother's general staff are all dependent on her money. Mrs. Ingelthorpe has a premonition approaching evil. With Lawrence he coils on Cynthia at the nursery where she works. He runs across M. Poirot, an old friend and a celebrated detective. Mrs. Ingelthorpe, looking flushed, goes to her room to finish some letters. Cynthia wonders what it was all about.

How to make better STRAWBERRY JAM with one minute's boiling

Certo "short-boil" method saves the fresh flavor and bright color of your fruit—makes 10 glasses of jam from 2 quarts of berries—insures success every time.

NO OTHER FRUIT, perhaps, suffers so much from the old method of long cooking as the delicate, delicious strawberry.

You need never again stand over the kettle watching your strawberries darken, their fragrant fresh flavor drift away in steam while you "boil them down" for jam.

For with Certo you can make perfect strawberry jam with only one minute's boiling!

Certo is the natural jellying substance in fruit which causes it to jelly. Science nature has distributed this substance so unequally in the different fruits, giving very few of them enough to jelly all of their juice and making all sorts of jam in one recipe—you have always had to go on cooking and cooking your fruit in the effort to reduce it to the point where it would jelly.

Now we have extracted this jellying substance from fruit, refined, concentrated, and made it all ready for you to use with any fruit. With Certo no long cooking is necessary. It provides enough jellying substance at the start to jelly all the fruit juice.

Famous cooking expert recommends Certo

Miss Alice Bradley, Principal, Miss Farmer's School, Country, and Cooking Editor, Women's Home Companion, says: "I strongly advise all housewives to make all their jams and jellies with Certo because—It's easier—Takes only one minute's boiling. Tastes better—No sugar added—No long boiling. No worry—Never fails to set. It's economical—Fifty per cent more from given amount of fruit and no waste from failures."

Get Certo from your grocer. In the recipe book which comes with the Certo for Jam recipe you will find nearly 100 simple recipes for making better looking, better tasting jams and jellies from all the other berries and fruits in their season.

Now Go on with the Story

"Of course not. She happened to be near the door. It was a real old bust-up. I do wish I knew what it was all about."

I thought of Mrs. Raikes' gray face and Evelyn Howard's warnings, but wisely decided to hold my peace, while Cynthia exhausted every possible hypothesis, and cheerfully hoped, "Aunt Emily will send him away, and will never speak to him again."

I was anxious to get hold of John, but he was nowhere to be seen. Evidently something very momentous had occurred that afternoon. I tried to forget the few words I had overheard, but, do what I could, I could not dismiss them altogether from my mind. What was Mary Cavendish's concern in the matter?

Mr. Ingelthorpe was in the drawing room when I came down to supper. His face was impressive as ever, and the strange unreality of the man struck me afresh.

Mrs. Ingelthorpe came down last. She still looked agitated, and during the meal there was a somewhat constrained silence. Ingelthorpe was unusually quiet. As a rule, he surrounded his wife with little attentions, placing a cushion at her back, and at together playing the part of the devoted husband. Immediately after supper Mrs. Ingelthorpe retired to her bedroom again.

"Send my coffee in here, Mary," she called. "I've just five minutes to catch the post."

Cynthia and I went and sat by the open window in the drawing room. Mary Cavendish brought our coffee to us. She seemed excited.

"Do you young people want lights, or do you enjoy the twilight?" she asked. "Will you take Mrs. Ingelthorpe's coffee, Cynthia? I'll pour it out."

"The trouble, Mary," said Ingelthorpe, "I will take it to Emily. I'll pour it out and went out of the room carrying it carefully."

Lawrence followed him, and Mrs. Cavendish sat down by us. We three sat at our usual time in silence. It was a glorious night, hot and still. Mrs. Cavendish fanned herself gently with a palm leaf.

"It's almost too hot," she murmured. "We shall have a thunderstorm."

Also, that these harmonious moments can never endure. My paradise was rudely shattered by the sound of a well known, and heartily disliked, voice in the hall.

"Dr. Bauerstein!" exclaimed Cynthia. "What a funny time to come!" I glanced jealously at Mary Cavendish, but she seemed quite undisturbed, the delicate pallor of her cheeks did not vary.

In a few moments, Alfred Ingelthorpe had ushered the doctor in, the latter laughing and protesting that he was in no fit state for a drawing room. In truth, he presented a sorry spectacle, being literally plastered with mud.

"What have you been doing, doctor?" cried Mrs. Cavendish.

"I must make my apologies," said the doctor. "I did not really mean to come in, but Mr. Ingelthorpe insisted."

"Well, Bauerstein, you are in a plight," said John, striding in from the hall. "Have some coffee, and tell us what you have been up to."

"Thank you, I will," he laughed rather ruefully, as he described how he had discovered a very rare species of fern in an inaccessible place, and his efforts to obtain it had lost his footing, and slipped ignominiously into a neighboring pond.

"The sun soon dried me off," he added, "but I am afraid my appearance is very disreputable."

At this juncture, Mrs. Ingelthorpe called to Cynthia from the hall, and the girl ran out.

"Just carry up my dispatch-case, will you dear? I'm going to bed."

The door into the hall was a wide one. I had seen when Cynthia did. John was close by me. There were therefore three witnesses who could swear that Mrs. Ingelthorpe was carrying her coffee, as yet unopened, in her hand.

My evening was utterly and entirely spoiled by the presence of Dr. Bauerstein. It seemed to me the man would never go. He rose at last, however, and I breathed a sigh of relief.

"I'll walk down to the village with you," said Mr. Ingelthorpe. "I must see one of my estate agents on a errand." He turned to John. "One or two need sit up. I will take the kitchen."

To be continued.

Jubilee's Pardner
A Story of Boyhood Adventure
BY JUD M. LEWIS

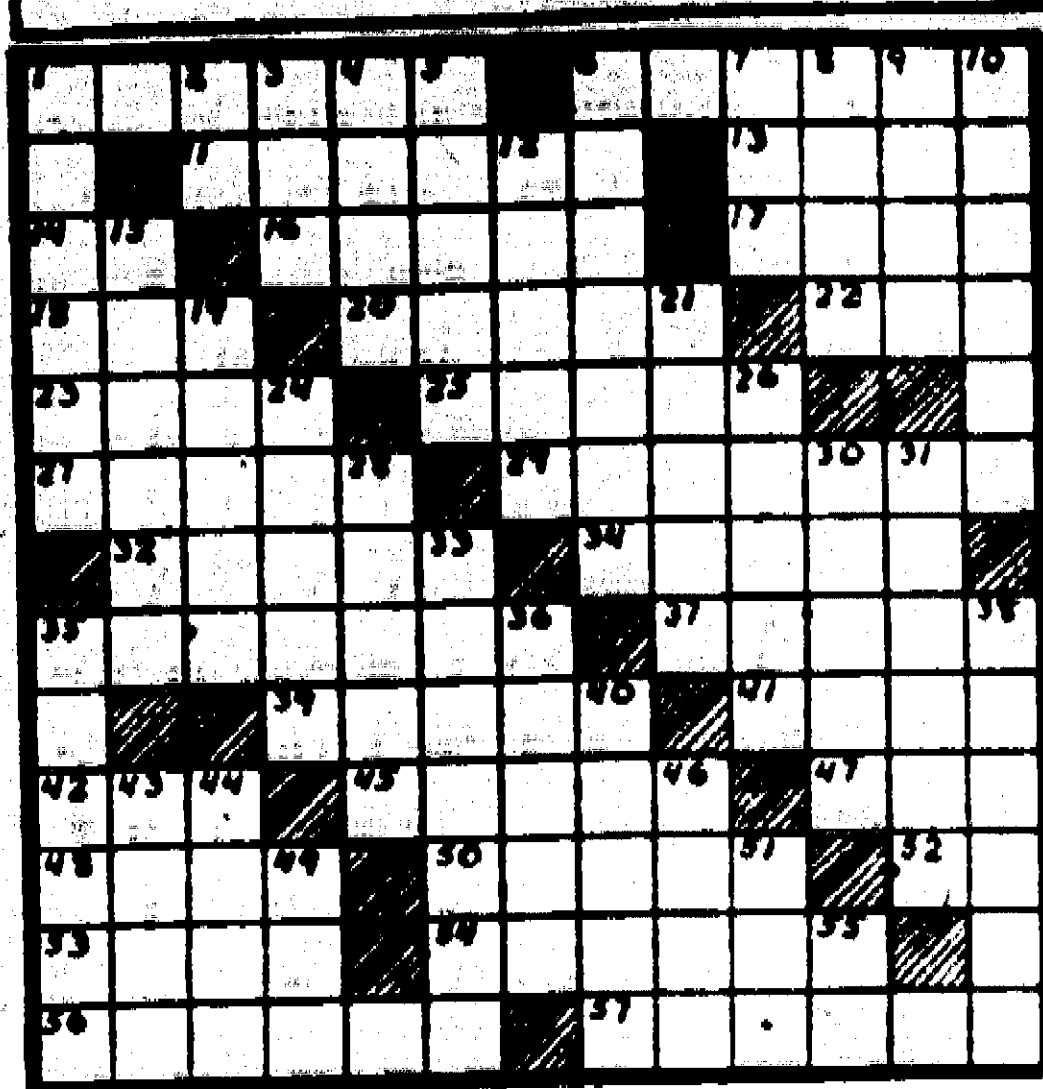

TODAY was Tuesday when I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth, and I went down after I had pulled the rope and got the pole and the boat was there and we finished my boat trap and baited it with a couple of minnows of corn which we had from the fish store. Then I went to the house and fastened to the tricker with a piece of wire, and I set it up on the roof by the little hole in the attic that the squirrel had come through to get at the food of my bed, and by that time it was almost time to go to school, and the girls were setting down on our back step waiting for us to go, so we went; and I carried Jubilee home.

We have taken most of our time and haven't got very much to do before vacation comes, and the teacher told about the same way we do about it. The teacher called the Last Day of Trips up and told him to tell the school what he had learnt during the term just drawing to a close. The Last Day of Trips had to be last learnt all about improper fractions, and the teacher said he could always be trusted to know about anything that was important. That must have been a job, because she called like the rest that of the canary. Then the teacher called a lot of others and they told about things they had learnt in geography or history or arithmetic. I was trying to remember something I had learned, but she called on me before I could remember anything, so I got up and said, "I have learnt that it is easier to get my lessons than to not get them. When I study hard and get them I am down, but if I don't get them I am never down."

When I set down the teacher said, "I am very proud of Thomas Arden." He has told you something which should be of great value to you all your lives. Then the school clapped and I could feel myself getting red way up past my ears.

When school let out we went out to the creek in the pasture for a swim, but the water was too cold so we only stayed in about half an hour. Then we went to the lake and there was not much to do there, so I took it all the way and set it on the ground under the pretty window, for the squirrel had been in the pretty window on the tree. While I was sleeping down setting the tricker, Auntie Letty told me a lot of old tales, and she told me all over me, and when I looked in the window to see who she was, and she was getting old and I put my hand against her face and looked surprised. She was getting old enough to find out that she was old and I put my hand against her face and I have a good word to say for my old and old grandpa.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affection

BY ADLE GARRISON

Mary Underwood shows still in a trying situation

I TURNED abruptly toward the bed where Junior lay unconscious, as Harry Underwood's telephone call told me that Dr. Pettit must have met with an accident on the way to the farmhouse. Then Lillian's arm went firmly round me.

"Listen," she commanded. "Harry will get somebody you'll see."

Her voice held encouragement—and something else—a subtle reproach which was like the touch of a spur to my faltering spirit. I grasped her hand tightly.

"Thank you!" I whispered. "I'm all right."

She flashed a heartening smile at me, and we both listened tensely to Mr. Underwood's staccato phrases.

"Oh! Too bad. What's that? You, yes, anybody who's really got right away. Good girl! Thank you!"

He turned from the telephone, looked at his watch and noted something upon the back of an envelope which he took from his pocket.

"We'll have to do something for that girl," he said, and I guessed that he was putting down a reminder of the hour when he had called her so that he could identify her later in the office.

"She's a wonder," he went on. "Pettit's in an accident—takes to the hospital. She knew he was on his way home, and rung up the minute the news came through her wire. She's going to get a doctor as soon as she possibly can."

He walked back to the bed and stood looking down at Junior. Suddenly he reached Lillian's arm, then stepping back he flung her over his shoulder and the girl's right shoulder, and then looked significantly at Lillian. I broke away from Lillian's restraining hand, and sprang between the two.

"What is it?" I said, conscious of a sudden change in the air. "What are you two doing?"

"Don't you see?" Lillian said, smiling, but the next instant he jerked out an equally important "Harry!" I was so surprised, for I knew that his nerves were so raw as steel. But Lillian's voice in cool command, about my hysterical query.

"Tell her what you mean," she said. "The one word whatever it is better than suspense. And it is her right to know."

"It's nothing to worry over," he burst out. "It's only that the little chair's shoulder is dislocated. When on thought Pettit would be here in ten minutes."

When school let out we went out to the creek in the pasture for a swim, but the water was too cold so we only stayed in about half an hour. Then we went to the lake and there was not much to do there, so I took it all the way and set it on the ground under the pretty window, for the squirrel had been in the pretty window on the tree. CHAPTER VI

SOMETHING whirled through the air, a rope whirled around Jethro's torso, planting him to his knees with cruel force. He was sprawling on his back, being dragged steadily backward. . . . He commenced to scream—curses and furious commands to be let alone.

In vain. He felt the strain on the rope slacken for an appreciable instant and scrambled to his feet. Instantly the rope tightened. He turned. A rawhide rope extended from him, over the top of the gate and on the ground to the house. And under that middle was a small, wiry, cow-puncher, calmly backing up and slowly, without excitement, dragging Jethro toward the gate. . . . Bob Mason was striding toward him.

"You're in a hell-fired hurry, Jethro," he said unsmilingly. "If I hadn't had my rope ready, waiting for you over at the blacksmith shop, you'd have been me to the house. And of course I wouldn't be impolite enough to force an entrance. You could shoot me for that and you would, you scaly scoundrel!"

He unclipped the gate, called to his horse to come in and, when the rope slackened, lifted it clear of the pailings. Instantly Jethro tried to slip the noose over his shoulders. "Back, Toby, back," Mason called, and the pony backed easily the noose slid up over Jethro's chest and tightened around his throat.

"Now what would you do if my horse took a notion to run away?" Jethro queried plaintively. "Don't strangle me. I'm not going to hurt you—yet. Just answer me a question. The rope isn't so tight it's cut off your wind. Whoa, Toby! Steady, boy." He walked up to Jethro and eased the noose a trifle. "Tell me, Jethro, what business have you to discuss with Miss Monica Dale?"

"I want to talk to her about buying Honey Valley."

"She doesn't own it any more. She has deeded it back to me, now that I'm out of the pen and can use it again. If you want to buy my ranch talk to me."

"Do you want to sell Honey Valley?" Jethro gasped.

"Well, then, we have nothing further to discuss."

"Are you still going up to Bogus?"

"No, it seems I haven't any business there now, Mr. Mason."

"I heard the postmaster tell one of your routeabouts to have your gray horse saddled right after lunch that you were going up to Bogus. You take it from me, you're not welcome on Bogus."

"Well, I'm not going," Jethro showed in the white face.

Bob Mason grinned triumphantly. "Well I am, and you've got an envelope in your breast pocket belonging to Miss Dale. Give it to me, you pole cat."

Jethro wet his lips. He saw no sign on Bob Mason's face that he was not on his guard, otherwise he would have been dragging him across country behind that devilish horse. Also, his supercilious sneer, his approach, his leaning forward to temperance, to be defiant eye.

"If I have an envelope in my pocket belonging to Miss Dale, you can easily have it to me to see that it is deeded to Miss Dale. I know of no reason why I should entrust her property with you, Mason."

"I'm going to take the rope off you, Jethro."

"Do, please. You had no business to put it on me, damn you."

With both hands Bob unloosed the noose around Jethro's neck and while he was lifting the stiff rawhide rope clear of the latter's head, Jethro struck him furiously, left and right. The man was so weakly, and under the impact of both blows Bob Mason unaccountably sat down.

"How many Jethros do you see, Mason?" Jethro called triumphantly. "His last for the day was being richly satisfied, albeit the drama had taken an unexpected turn. Bob Mason arose from his knees a little and then rolled over on his back. It was a perfect knockout, and while he lay there help Jethro kicked him brutally in the side."

"Only a slight concussion," he said. "You did a good thing in putting that other rope on me. I'm appreciative. The boy should be kept absolutely quiet for a while after he has been so badly treated. I'll look in again in a few hours. When he wakes call me, and I'll come right over."

Dicky accompanied him to the door, and Lillian, with her usual efficiency, was removing from the room the things which must be in our way. Mr. Underwood brought a low chair to the side of the bed and gently put me into it. With brimming eyes I looked up at him.

"A hell-fired hurry," I said, "you told me I had frightened out a problem for you, and that if you ever could do anything for me, you would do it. How terribly you have made that wish come true! I never can thank you enough for saving my boy from pain."

Before he could repeat the kick McNaughton sprang at him and shoved him away. "Not according to the rules, Mr. Jethro," he reminded him superiorly. "You knocked him out, didn't you? That was fair enough. He'd already manhandled you and ruined your clothes. But a couple of kicks like that may easily enough kill a man—and I can't permit that. Ma—"

"Tell somebody to drag him away," Jethro panted, and turned to reenter the gate. But McNaughton's hand fell on his shoulder. "Just a minute, Mr. Jethro. You kicked him when he was down and that settles him. He won't bother you any more. And when you've knocked him out the second time keep your feet in your pocket."

He stepped quickly in Jethro's rear, placed both hands between Jethro's shoulder-blades and propelled him furiously forward into Bob Mason's groping arms.

Through the little settlement rang the joyous cry: "Fight! Fight!" From store and shop and shanty men, women, children emerged, and while Bob Mason, refraining from striking a blow but holding his enemy in a tight embrace, until his chest should clear, struggled and strained to retain his prey, the men of Dogwood Flat came running to the scene.

"It's a grudge fight!" McNaughton warned. "I'll fire the man that interferes and if I can't fire him I'll kick him. Stand back, men. Don't crowd them."

"Thanks, McNaughton," the moon-follower panted over Jethro's huge shoulder. "I'm beholden to you for that. Any particular rules?"

"He made the rules when he kicked you. You can make your own rules now—if you're able."

Jethro was far, but under his fat he had muscle. Thus, in his college days, he had been an all-round athlete of no mean pretensions and, although years of easy living had softened him and rubbed him of his wind, he was still good for a few minutes of short-arm punches. With rapid, furious, whirling action he broke the clutch-punched himself out of a tangled heap, then dropped back to measure his man.

He missed on his first instant was off balance for the fraction of a second. Mason lunged clear of the ground and struck his opponent with his knee—Jethro went down on his back, and Mason kicked him until he was unconscious, smothered his face in, left him lying there a bloody, bruised, unconscious man.

He slipped over Jethro and to reenter the gate. But McNaughton's hand fell on his shoulder. "Just a minute, Mr. Jethro. You kicked him when he was down and that settles him. He won't bother you any more. And when you've knocked him out the second time keep your feet in your pocket."
